1 I, STEVEN WEISBROT, hereby declare under penalty of perjury as follows:

2 1. I am a partner at the class action notice and settlement administration firm, Angeion Group,
 3 LLC (“Angeion”). I am fully familiar with the facts contained herein based upon my personal 4 knowledge.

5 2. My credentials were previously outlined in my prior declaration in this case, which was 6 filed on April 3, 2018, as docket number 144-7.

7 3. The purpose of this declaration is to provide the Court with an update on the work
 8 performed by Angeion related to the notice plan and other administrative tasks following the 9 Court’s Order Granting Motion for Preliminary Approval of Settlement, filed on April 16, 2018,
 10 and the Court’s Further Order re Preliminary Approval of Class Action Settlement, Setting Dates
 11 for Final Approval, filed on April 24, 2018.
 12

13 DISTRIBUTION OF CAFA NOTICE

14 4. On April 10, 2018, as required by 28 U.S.C. § 1715(b), Angeion caused Notice regarding 15 the settlement to be sent to the Attorneys General of all states and territories, as well as the 16 Attorney General of the United States (“CAFA Notice”). The mailings included the items set forth
 17 in the CAFA Notice. A copy of the CAFA Notice is attached hereto as Exhibit “1.”
 18

19 ONLINE NOTICE

20 5. On May 18, 2018, Angeion caused the internet banner notice to commence. The banner
 21 notice portion of the Notice Plan ran for 4 consecutive weeks and served a total of 58,619,588
 22 impressions. The total number of impressions served exceeded the projected number of 23 impressions for this campaign. As discussed in further detail below, this increased the final reach 24 percentage among the target audience. The banner notices contained a link to the Settlement 25 Website at www.oliveoilsettlement.com. Images of the banner ads used in the Notice Plan are 26 attached hereto as Exhibit “2”.

27 6. As of June 25, 2018, the Settlement Website has had 276,567 unique visitors, totaling 28

1 1,905,567 pageviews.

2 PUBLICATION NOTICE

3 7. In order to satisfy the notice requirements of the California Legal Remedies Act
 4 (“CLRA”), the notice program caused the Published Notice to be published in the San Francisco
 5 Chronicle for four consecutive weeks commencing on May 18, 2018. The San Francisco
 6 Chronicle’s circulation is 105,531. The dates of publication in the San Francisco Chronicle were 7 May 18, 2018, May 25, 2018, June 1, 2018 and June 8, 2018. Copies of the tear sheets from those 8 publications are attached hereto as Exhibit “3”.

9 8. On June 8, 2018, Angeion caused the Published Notice to be published in People Magazine
 10 as a one-half page black and white insertion. People Magazine’s circulation is 3,510,533.
 11 However, given the high reader per copy ratio, 7,346,000 members of the Target Audience were 12 exposed to the publication notice which ran in People Magazine. A copy of that Published Notice
 13 is attached hereto as Exhibit “4”.

14 PURCHASED AND EARNED MEDIA

15 9. On May 18, 2018, Angeion caused the instant settlement to be listed and promoted through 16 two leading class action settlement websites, www.topclassactions.com and www.classaction.org.
 17 Screenshots of those websites are attached hereto as Exhibit “5”.

18 10. On May 18, 2018, Angeion caused a press release detailing the Settlement to be issued via 19 PR Newswire. PR Newswire’s U.S. Distribution delivers messages to approximately 10,000 media 20 points. As of June 25, 2018, a total of 228 news outlets picked up the notice of the Settlement from 21 the press release. A copy of the press release and a list of the 228 news outlets that picked up the 22 notice are attached hereto as Exhibit “6”.

23 SUMMARY OF THE NOTICE PROGRAM

24 11. The notice program delivered an approximate 78.89% reach with an average frequency of 25 2.1x each. The 78.89% reach exceeds the targeted 75.6% reach discussed in my prior declaration.
 26 Further, the 78.89% reach does not include the print publications in the San Francisco Chronicle,
 27 the promotion through the class action settlement websites, the press release, informational 28 website (discussed below) or toll-free hotline, as they are not easily calculable in reach percentage, but nonetheless aide in informing Settlement Class Members of their rights and options under the Settlement.

SETTLEMENT WEBSITE

12. On May 17, 2017, Angeion established the following website devoted to this Settlement: www.oliveoilsettlement.com. The Settlement Website contains general information about the Settlement, Court documents, a downloadable Claim Form, a downloadable and HTML searchable Long-Form Notice, and important dates and deadlines pertinent to this Settlement. Settlement Class Members can send an email to a dedicated email address, info@oliveoilsettlement.com, with questions pertaining to the Settlement.

13. Settlement Class Members can also submit Claim Forms and requests for Exclusion electronically via the Settlement Website.

TOLL-FREE HOTLINE

14. On May 17, 2018, Angeion established the following toll-free hotline devoted to this case: 1-855-732-9315. The toll-free hotline utilizes an interactive voice response (“IVR”) system to provide Settlement Class Members with responses to frequently asked questions and inform Settlement Class Members of important dates and deadlines pertaining to the Settlement. The toll-free hotline is accessible 24 hours a day, 7 days a week. Settlement Class Members also have the ability to leave a message requesting a Claim Form and/or Long Form Notice via the toll-free hotline. As of June 25, 2018, the toll-free hotline has received 337 calls, totaling 1,002 minutes.

CLAIM FORM SUBMISSIONS

15. The deadline for Settlement Class Members to submit a Claim Form is 30 days after Final Approval is granted. As June 25, 2018, Angeion has received approximately 143,000 Claim Form submissions. Angeion will continue to keep the Parties apprised of the number of Claim Form submissions and will submit a subsequent declaration to the Court regarding the number and dollar amount of Claim Forms received to date.

REQUESTS FOR EXCLUSION AND OBJECTIONS

16. The deadline to request exclusion from the Settlement or to object to the Settlement is July 12, 2018. As of June 25, 2018, Angeion has received 58 requests for exclusion, and has not been

1 made aware of any objections to the Settlement. Angeion shall inform the parties of any requests
2 for exclusion or objections received after the date of this declaration.

Birth rate poses risk to economy

At 30-year low, it may threaten U.S. growth

By Christopher Rugaber

WASHINGTON — Women in the United States gave birth last year at the lowest rate in 30 years, a trend that could weigh on economic growth in the coming decades.

The Center for Disease Control and Prevention's National Center for Health Statistics said Thursday that the number of U.S. babies born last year fell 2 percent from 2016 to 3.85 million, also a 30-year low. Births have fallen for three straight years. The fertility rate dropped 3 percent last year to 60.2 births per 1,000 women ages 15 through 44.

An aging society has already weighed on economic growth in the United States in the past decade, with the vast Baby Boom generation retiring and fewer young people replacing them. Thursday's data suggests that the trend is likely to continue.

Economic growth is generally driven by population growth and worker efficiency, both of which have slowed in the past decade in the United States.

Kathy Bostjancic, an economist at Oxford Economics, a consulting firm, said that roughly 10 years ago, the number of Americans working or looking for work was growing about 1 percent annually. With birthrates declining, that figure has since fallen to about a 0.3 percent growth rate. That essentially acts as a 0.7 percentage point drag on the United States' long-run growth rate.

"Demographics have a really powerful impact on the economy," Bostjancic said.

The U.S. economy has grown at a 3 percent average annual rate since World War II. Yet it hasn't reached that pace for a full calendar year since 2005. The Baby Boomers first reached retirement age in 2008.

The Federal Reserve in March upgraded its short-term economic growth forecast to about 2.7 percent for this year and 2.4 percent in 2019, partly because of the Trump administration's tax cuts. But the Fed kept its longer-run annual growth forecast at 1.8 percent, reflecting the demographic challenges.

Aside from fewer workers, an aging society can hold back growth because fewer people are buying homes, cars and other costly purchases. Savings generally rise as people age and prepare for retirement. And as elderly people live longer, they also slow their spending while in retirement, Bostjancic noted.

Most economists attribute the low interest rates and low inflation of the past decade, in the United States, Europe and Japan, at least in part to aging.

In Japan, where adult diapers outsell those for children, the impact of fewer births has kept growth nearly nonexistent for more than two decades. The economy has picked up recently and enjoyed two straight years of growth, the longest such streak since the late 1980s, before contracting again in the first three months of this year.

The U.S. accepts many more immigrants than does Japan, and that influx has boosted population growth. The Labor Department released separate data Thursday showing that last year, there were 27.4 million foreign-born workers in the United States, the most since records began in 2005. Immigrants now make up 17.1 percent of the U.S. workforce.

Economic research earlier this year found that U.S. fertility fell sharply roughly nine months before the past three recessions. That suggests that such declines could signal economic downturns.

But Kasey Buckles, an economics professor at Notre Dame who conducted the research with two colleagues, said that recent such declines aren't sharp enough to point to a recession.

Instead, she noted that fertility declines over the past three years have occurred mostly among women under 30. Birth rates among older women have risen or held steady. That suggests that the fertility declines reflect largely a drop in unwanted pregnancies since the 2008-2009 recession.

Fertility among women of all ages fell sharply in 2008 and 2009, Buckles said, but rebounded quickly for women 30 and over. Separate data from the Guttmacher Institute, a policy organization that tracks reproductive health, shows that unwanted pregnancies have fallen since the Great Recession, Buckles said.

"It's possible that the Great Recession may have been something of a triggering event that caused people to be more intentional about their fertility," she said.

FDA pushes drugmakers to encourage generics isolation is not needed. The FDA has been speeding up approval of generic drugs, and nearly 90 percent of prescriptions are filled with generics.

But others point to the ways in which major pharmaceutical companies have managed to keep patents on certain expensive drugs for years longer than necessary.

Generic drug developers usually need 1,500 to 5,000 units of the brand drug to develop their product and test it, to show that it is effective and can be absorbed at the same rate as the brand drug, according to the agency. Both the FDA and the Federal Trade Commission say securing the samples can be difficult, because major drug firms can invoke safety concerns — real or unreal — to avoid providing the materials.

The FDA's new list includes drug companies the agency said may be pursuing gaming tactics to delay generic competition. Along with the name of each business, the agency noted how many inquiries it received from generic drug companies seeking supplies. The names of the generic companies were not provided.

While Celgene tops the list, other companies that the FDA named as the subject of complaints include GlaxoSmithKline, Pfizer, Valeant Pharmaceuticals International, Novartis' BioMarin Pharmaceutical, Foster City's Gilead Sciences and Novartis Pharmaceuticals.

Celgene, which makes drugs to treat cancer and immune-inflammatory diseases, was named as the subject of 31 inquiries from companies seeking access to Revlimid (lenalidomide), its treatment for multiple myeloma and related diseases; Pomalyst (pomalidomide); and Thalomid (thalidomide).

Celgene has been embroiled in lawsuits for several years with companies seeking access to the drugs. It recently sued Dr. Reddy's Laboratories Ltd., an Indian company, to block it from selling generic copies of Revlimid, the company's biggest product, and has been fending off an attempt by Mylan to also get into the generic Revlimid business. At a court hearing last year, a lawyer for Mylan, Jonathan M. Jacobson, told a federal district judge that the drug costs dying patients $20,000 a month — a price that would decline if generics were available.

Greg Geissman, a spokesman for Celgene, said the company had not prevented generic companies from obtaining their products.

"We have sold and will sell our ground-breaking products to generic manufacturers for the purposes of bioequivalence testing, subject to reasonable safety-related and business requirements," Geissman said. "Generic versions of Thalomid and Revlimid are expected to enter the market in coming years."

Geissman also said that Celgene supports federal efforts to promote access to samples at reasonable prices, as long as there is appropriate safety and liability protection for the seller.

The next biggest target, with 26 inquiries, is Actelion Pharmaceuticals Ltd., a Johnson & Johnson company, which is accused of blocking access to four drugs. There were 14 inquiries about getting supplies of Tracleer (bosentan), a medication prescribed for high blood pressure in the vessels of the lungs, known as pulmonary arterial hypertension. The FDA also received eight complaints about lack of access to Opsumit (macitentan), which is also used to treat pulmonary arterial hypertension and Zavesca is indicated for Gaucher disease.

An average one-month supply of Tracleer costs just over $12,000, and a supply of Opsumit runs $8,900 to $10,000, according to GoodRx, which tracks drug prices. Both prices are based on the patient presenting a free discount coupon.

Many pharmaceutical companies sell both brand-name and generic drugs, leading to a situation in which a company like Mylan, still fighting Celgene in court, can be on the receiving end of generic company complaints.

The FDA's list of shame notes three inquiries from companies trying to get access to Mylan's Amnesteem (isotretinoin), used to treat severe cystic acne that has not responded to antibiotic treatment.

and social activists, as well as communications specialists and others, to publicize the struggles of working women facing harassment on the job.

Actress Susan Sarandon, along with Pitre, female Walmart workers and labor activists, signed a letter to the retailer's chief executive, demanding changes in the company's policies and procedures around harassment.

"I don't care who you are," said Pitre, who left her job at Walmart last month. "There is no cause for disrespect."

Walmart said it had conducted a "comprehensive investigation" into Pitre's complaints and "could not substantiate a violation of our Discrimination and Harassment Prevention Policy."

"We do not tolerate discrimination or harassment of any kind and thoroughly investigate all sexual harassment allegations," the company added.

Since it started in January, the Time's Up fund — which is administered by the National Women's Law Center in Washington — has raised about $22 million in donations to help pay for legal representation and other assistance for women facing harassment.

So far, about 2,700 workers have contacted the fund, saying they have been harassed. The largest number of complaints, about 9 percent, have come from the arts industry, followed by workers in the federal government, education and health care. Retail workers made roughly 5 percent of the complaints.

Volunteers at the National Women's Law Center, an advocacy group focused on women's rights, have been reviewing the online complaints and providing many workers with names of lawyers who might be willing to take on their case. The law center does not yet the facts of each case, but relies on the workers' lawyers to make sure the claims are sound.

When deciding on funding, the staff uses a set of "priorities," including whether the worker is in a low-wage job or in a male-dominated occupation.

"We hope to send a message to employers," said Emily Martin, the law center's general counsel. "Just because a woman doesn't have a lot of money or connections doesn't mean someone isn't going to stand up for them."

The assistance from Time's Up is relatively modest — about $3,000 to help pay the initial lawyer fees. If the case goes to trial, the fund will provide up to $100,000 for fees.

In some cases, publicity is part of the strategy. The National Women's Law Center will provide "communications support" — connecting women with public relations specialists — to help them call attention to their story.

Martin said publicity could help "broaden the impact" of the legal cases in combatting harassment. Toward that end, the law center connected Pitre with Our Walmart, a worker advocacy group. This month, Our Walmart sent the letter signed by Pitre and Sarandon to CEO Doug McMillon, calling on the retailer to revamp its harassment procedures.

A Walmart spokesman said in a statement, "We have strong policies and procedures in place to address allegations of sexual harassment, and we believe our current practices meet or exceed many of the requests in the letter."

When Pitre started working at Walmart in June 2016, she liked the job, she said. But after a few months, a supervisor started to harass her, including instances when he grabbed her breasts and made "unwelcome sexual comments," according to her lawsuit.

Last July, she reported the harassment to a company ethics department, her lawsuit says. Pitre said she was eventually told that the company's investigation was closed, but was never told the outcome.

A Walmart spokesman said the company does not disclose the outcomes of its harassment investigations to anyone, including the employee filing the complaint. The spokesman said this policy is aimed at the "privacy and confidentiality of all concerned."

In its letter, Our Walmart demands that the company start informing employees about the results of its harassment investigations.

Pitre had previous experience with harassment. In 2008, she filed a lawsuit in federal court, accusing her former managers at the Boomtown Casino in Biloxi, Miss., of groping her and making sexually suggestive comments, according to her lawsuit.

The case resulted in a confidential settlement and "the termination and/or discipline of certain parties at Boomtown Casino," a company spokesman said in an email.

Martin said she was not aware of Pitre's earlier lawsuit when the Time's Up fund approved funding for her Walmart case. But Martin said it would not have been a factor in the decision.

"It is not shocking that this job is not the first job where Gina has experienced some sort of harassment," Martin said.

The Jackson, Miss., office of the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission said it had been "unable to conclude" that the "information obtained" in Pitre's case showed that Walmart had broken the law. The agency added that its ruling did not mean Walmart was "in compliance with the statutes," either.

Apple, Volkswagen reach autonomous van deal

By Jack Nicas

Apple once had grand aspirations to build its own electric self-driving car and lead the next generation of transportation. Over time, the ambitions ran into the reality.

So it curtailed its vision, first by focusing on software for self-driving cars and then by working solely on an autonomous shuttle for its employees. Now, it has settled for an auto partner that was not its first choice.

For several years, Apple sought partnerships with luxury carmakers BMW and Mercedes-Benz to develop an all-electric self-driving vehicle, according to five people familiar with the negotiations who asked not to be identified because they were not authorized to discuss the matter publicly. But on-again, off-again talks with those companies ended after each rebuffed Apple's requirements to hand over control of the data and design, some of the people said.

Instead, Apple has signed a deal with Volkswagen to turn some of the carmaker's new T6 Transporter vans into Apple's self-driving shuttles for employees — a project that is behind schedule and consuming nearly all of the Apple car team's attention, said three people familiar with the project.

Apple's deal with Volkswagen and the failure of its talks with other automakers reflect the continuing travails and diminished scope of the Cupertino company's 4-year-old car program.

The project has suffered from repeated changes in direction that have hurt morale and led to hundreds of departures from its peak of more than 1,000 members two years ago, five former Apple employees said. They added that the project lacked a clear plan beyond the vans, including any near-term commercial goals.

DRIVING THE FUTURE

The fits and starts have most likely put Apple even further behind in the race toward the self-driving future. Waymo, the self-driving business spun out of Google, as well as startups and some carmakers have been testing various autonomous vehicles on public roads for years. Some of the programs have hit hurdles — Uber on Wednesday said it was shutting down its self-driving operations in Arizona and laying off about 300 employees in the area — but many have already gathered extensive data on autonomous driving patterns to improve their technology.

Apple declined to comment.

Apple originally began its car project — known internally as Titan and T172 — in 2014. At the time, Apple planned to build a single vehicle that would upend society and industry, in what would be the automotive version of the iPhone. The company set to work on an electric driverless car with a lush interior reminiscent of a lounge or living room, where passengers face each other instead of the road, according to two early employees.

Apple enlisted software programmers, automotive engineers, rocket scientists and the industrial-design team of Apple's design chief, Jonathan Ive, to reimagine the car. They entertained a series of unconventional concepts, including augmented-reality or holographic displays embedded in windshields and windows, a sunroof made of a special polymer that reduces heat from the sun, and windows with adjustable tints — like those on Boeing's new 787 Dreamliner jets.

Two former employees also recalled how their colleagues built a model of a sport utility vehicle with four seats facing each other, which some employees tested by sitting inside, similar to a design Mercedes advertised in 2015.

As recently as 2016, Apple planned to spend hundreds of millions of dollars to build research and development labs around its Cupertino campus, including a machine shop and labs for electric car batteries, according to interviews and documents about the plans viewed by the New York Times.

Late last year, Apple found a partner in Volkswagen. Buffeted by a scandal around cheating emissions tests — and lagging rivals in development of self-driving cars — Volkswagen jumped at the chance, former Apple employees said.

Now, at a lab near Turin, Italy, run by a Volkswagen subsidiary called Italdesign, the companies plan to remake Volkswagen's T6 vans as electric self-driving shuttles, these people said.

vans that it has been testing in Phoenix; Mountain View; Austin, Texas; and Kirkland, Wash.

"We're excited to deepen our relationship with (Fiat) that will support the launch of our driverless service, and explore future products that support Waymo's mission," Waymo CEO John Krafcik said in a statement.

Waymo, a unit of Mountain View's Alphabet, will begin purchasing the minivans late this year. It gave no details on how many it expects to purchase this year or next, or what period the purchase agreement covers.

The company has been working on self-driving technology for nearly a decade and is focusing on four potential lines of business. In addition to the ride service it intends to start, Waymo also expects to put its autonomous-driving technology into trucks and delivery vehicles. It is also developing systems for buses or other vehicles that can ferry riders to mass transportation systems. The fourth area would involve licensing its technology to automakers like Fiat Chrysler.

In March, Krafcik said these four areas have the potential to become highly profitable. Waymo does not intend to make cars itself.

The companies said Thursday that they were in talks about licensing Waymo technology to Fiat Chrysler so the carmaker can at some point sell self-driving minivans to consumers.

Fiat Chrysler "is committed to bringing self-driving technology to our customers in a manner that is safe, efficient and realistic," CEO Sergio Marchionne said in a statement. "Strategic partnerships, such as the one we have with Waymo, will help to drive innovative technology to the forefront."

to put production to work," said Michael Ronen, managing partner of SoftBank Investment Advisors, which manages the fund.

SoftBank will get a 19.6 percent stake in the newly formed GM Cruise Holdings LLC. The investment values the business at $11.5 billion — a huge premium to what GM paid, which was between $500 million and a billion, depending on incentives.

That lofty valuation, and future upside, will be a potent recruiting tool, said Kyle Vogt, Cruise CEO and co-founder.

"That's just the tip of the iceberg of what the company's value could be," he said. "Equity is a really attractive element of working at Cruise and will really help us in the war to acquire the best talent in the space."

Cruise now has 740 full-time employees in San Francisco and has increased its employee count by 40 percent a quarter, a pace Vogt expects to continue.

"Developing this technology is one of the most challenging problems of our generation," he said. "The complexity requires a very large number of people."

Cruise recently moved into new headquarters at 1201 Bryant St., from which its dozens of self-driving Chevy Bolts head out around the clock for tests on city streets with backup drivers.

GM continues to see ride-hailing as the obvious first use for robot cars, GM President Dan Ammann said.

"Beyond that, we see opportunities to move goods, package delivery and other use cases."

While Ammann ducked questions about where the robot taxis would launch, he said the fleets will be able to grow rapidly.

"GM knows how to do large-scale industrial production," he said.

SoftBank will invest $900 million initially and $1.35 billion when Cruise's autonomous cars are ready for deployment. GM's $1.1 billion infusion will come as soon as the deal closes.

Scores of companies, including virtually every automaker, are racing to get robot cars ready for commercial use.

Both GM and SoftBank have a web of investments related to self-driving cars, notably major stakes in Lyft by GM and in Uber by SoftBank.

GM has been quiet about its Lyft relationship, although its $500 million stake makes it a major investor. Ammann said GM does not have any active projects with Lyft.

"This whole space has a lot of relationships," he said. "All our energy now is focused on getting this technology ready for full driverless commercial deployment."

Underscoring that point, on Wednesday, Uber CEO Dara Khosrowshahi said at the Code conference in Los Angeles that his company was talking to Waymo, the driverless unit of Google parent Alphabet, about allowing Waymo self-driving vehicles to be hailed on the Uber app.

Monster plans big cryptocurrency offering

By Benny Evangelista

Monster Products, known for headphones and electronics cables, is turning to cryptocurrencies as part of its latest bid to reverse a tide of red ink.

The South San Francisco company plans to raise $300 million through what's known as an initial coin offering, a sale of digital tokens used both as a store of value and a means of payment. Monster plans to use its Monster Money tokens and blockchain technology — the technical underpinnings of cryptocurrencies like bitcoin and ethereum — to run the Monster Money Network, according to a document filed Friday with the Securities and Exchange Commission.

Monster Products said it will offer up to 300 million of those tokens at $1 each, which will then be used on the network to buy its products and services. Initial coin offerings, seen as a way to embrace blockchain technology and bypass traditional venture financing and stock offerings, have drawn regulators' attention lately, with concerns about scams and fraud.

The move to cryptocurrency isn't a complete shift away from the company's main consumer electronics business, which includes products like speaker and TV cords, Chief Operating Officer and interim President Fred Khalilian told The Chronicle.

But if the SEC approves the plan, a Monster cryptocurrency opens the door for potential new revenue sources, he said. The company has a website that touts the benefits of Monster Money in manufacturing, marketing, loyalty programs and global payments.

Founded as Monster Cable Products by CEO Noel Lee in San Francisco in 1978, the company is best known for its high-end speaker wires, power cables and other electronics accessories. Monster's fortunes rose to new heights when it helped introduce the popular Beats by Dre designer headphones line in the mid-2000s.

But the company, which was not publicly traded until recently, struggled financially after the dissolution of its partnership with Beats Electronics co-founders Jimmy Iovine and Andre "Dr. Dre" Young in 2012. Since then, the company has tried to market new lines of headphones and delved into other products and services, including online poker. The company bought its first-ever Super Bowl commercial in February.

The SEC filing details the company's mounting financial losses. Monster posted a net loss of $19.6 million in the quarter that ended March 31. That comes on top of a net loss of $26.7 million on sales of $57.5 million in 2017, and net loss of $29 million on revenue of $87.7 million in 2016.

"Monster's current business strategy is shifting focus away from simply building its product range to pursuing alternative retail platforms and implementing new marketing campaigns," the company said in the filing.

Monster plans to use blockchain technology "for payment processing, market analysis, accounting, audit and payroll services, inventory management and shipping operation," the filing said. "Eventually Monster hopes to use its influence, scale and global connections along with blockchain technology to bring a number of e-commerce platforms onto Monster Money Network where transactions will be processed and completed instantly with low or no transaction costs."

The company plans to create a total of 500 million tokens, but retain 200 million in a company wallet to be "released gradually" by the company's board of directors as incentives for "developers, contributors and strategic partners," the filing said.

Should the network fail to launch, the company said in the filing that it will issue 75 million shares of regular stock and exchange each share for four tokens.

This is not the only unusual financial maneuver Monster has pulled recently. In April, it was acquired by a so-called "blank check" company, Atlantic Acquisition Corp. Such firms have publicly traded shares but no operating business, and seek businesses to acquire. Reverse acquisitions, as these deals are known, allow companies to become public without undergoing the process of preparing and marketing an initial public offering to investors.

Khalilian said Lee will remain as CEO, but the company is seeking to hire a permanent president.

Zscaler is top tech IPO performer

San Jose's Zscaler became the best-performing U.S. technology initial public offering of the year Thursday, after it announced revenue growth that analysts noted was "well ahead" of estimates.

The stock jumped as much as 38 percent in trading Thursday morning, bringing performance since its initial public offering in March to about 164 percent. It eventually closed at $37.79, up 23 percent.

This year's U.S. tech and communications IPOs have returned 56 percent on average, according to data weighted by offering size and compiled by Bloomberg as of Wednesday.

The technology security company easily scaled Wall Street's expectations in its first earnings report as a public company. It posted $49.2 million in revenue in the third quarter, beating even the most bullish analyst estimates. Zscaler also cited "strong" billings growth, which rose 73 percent.

"Zscaler is a unique company positioned to disrupt a major sector and in the early stages of its emergence," Needham analyst Alex Henderson wrote in a note. Henderson rates the company a strong buy, with a price target of $40 a share. "We think this is going to be a major company over time," he added.

After the earnings report, analysts brightened their outlook. The average price target for Zscaler rose to $32 from $29 a week ago, Bloomberg data show. Still, some analysts cautioned against unbridled enthusiasm.

Morgan Stanley analyst Melissa Franchi wrote in a note that next quarter has a high bar to meet, as the company had several large deals in the same quarter last year. With shares already trading at an elevated level, "we're awaiting a more attractive entry point," Franchi wrote, rating the stock the equivalent of a hold.

U.S. Commerce Secretary Wilbur Ross (center) leaves a Beijing hotel June 2. U.S. officials have reached a deal to ease sanctions against Chinese smartphone maker ZTE.

By Ana Swanson,

The United States announced a deal Thursday to lift tough sanctions on Chinese telecommunications giant ZTE, a company that has been at the center of a dispute between China and the United States.

The Commerce Department said that ZTE had agreed to pay a $1 billion fine and allow the United States to more closely inspect the company by effectively having a hand-picked compliance team embedded inside.

It is not clear what the United States received in return. ZTE had been a bargaining chip in negotiations between the two countries, which have been striving to reach a trade deal that would prevent tit-for-tat tariffs from going into effect.

But the company's fate has gotten caught up in a bigger web, including an upcoming summit between President Trump and North Korea's leader and the success of a U.S. telecom company, Qualcomm, which sells a large amount of semiconductors to ZTE and is awaiting Chinese approval of a deal to acquire a Dutch telecom firm that will help it build the next generation of wireless technology, known as 5G.

Trump softened his approach to ZTE several weeks ago after Chinese President Xi Jinping asked Trump to consider erasing penalties on the company, which was headed toward collapse after U.S. sanctions barred it from buying any U.S.-made goods. That request came at a sensitive diplomatic moment for Trump, who is heading to Singapore next week to meet with North Korea's leader, Kim Jong Un. Trump has made Xi his partner on North Korea while condemning China's trade practices.

Trump has said the ZTE move is part of "the larger trade deal we are negotiating with China and my personal relationship with President Xi."

The settlement with ZTE is likely to inflame lawmakers, including top Republicans, who have objected to helping a Chinese company that has been accused of posing a national security threat. Defense officials have long been concerned that the company's products may be vulnerable to espionage or disruption. Major U.S. wireless carriers have for years been effectively blocked from buying its network equipment.

Plan could revive old Dumbarton railroad bridge

book recruit employees who live in Newark, Fremont and other East Bay communities but may be intimidated by the current jam on the Dumbarton road bridge. The rebuilt line could connect to the existing rail network.

The project could also include bicycle and pedestrian facilities as well as "enhanced bus service," the report said.

The Dumbarton Rail Bridge stopped operating in the 1980s, and SamTrans bought it and some nearby areas in 1994. But Facebook is the first group, public or private, that has shown interest since then in helping fund a reintroduction of rail, the report said. The company contributed $1 million two years ago to a study on area traffic improvements in partnership with SamTrans.

Members of the SamTrans board said the public-private partnership could set an example for how to address congestion across the region.

"I'm just really thrilled and excited to do this here in San Mateo County and take the lead on something like this," Rose Guilbault, a SamTrans board member, said at Wednesday's board meeting.

John Tenanes, Facebook's vice president of global facilities and real estate, said in a statement that the Dumbarton corridor was "one of many projects we are looking at to ease congestion in the Bay Area."

The company wants to re-open the Dumbarton rail bridge, he said, but "it's still early days and we need to understand the environmental impact of the proposal."

Traffic has gotten worse across the Peninsula recently as priced-out employees commute long distances to get to work. Some cities are considering a new tax that would raise substantial sums from large companies like Google and Apple to fund transportation improvements.

Facebook wants to build a new campus called Willow Village in Menlo Park, which would eventually bring its staff to 35,000 people — roughly the city's current population.

Ray Mueller, Menlo Park's mayor pro tem, welcomed Facebook's interest in reviving the Dumbarton corridor.

"It's exactly the type of progress we need here in Menlo Park in order to make the type of development they are contemplating work," he said.

Even as it hopes to move forward with the mammoth Menlo Park project, Facebook is also expanding rapidly across the Bay Area. It recently snapped up more than 1 million square feet of space in Sunnyvale, opened an office for its Instagram subsidiary at 181 Fremont in San Francisco, and leased all the office space in a 43-story office tower in San Francisco.

Kufrin says those emotions also helped develop a new understanding for what Arie experienced. "Making the tough decisions, I could empathize with him a lot more," she says. "Trying to balance feelings for multiple people—it's not easy, and there's no rule book."

But by the end, Kufrin says, her uncertainty vanished as she fell head over heels for her fiancé. The engagement "was the happiest moment in my life," she says. And given her painful past, Kufrin is more than ready for a fresh start. "This time it just has a different feeling. I'm so excited for everyone to see how it happened. Bertolli Olive Oil Class Action Settlement

By Top Class Actions
June 6, 2018

Deoleo USA Inc. has agreed to pay $7 million to settle a class action lawsuit that contends that certain "Bertolli" brand olive oil products (the "Products") were inappropriately marketed as "Imported from Italy" and/or "Extra Virgin."

The lawsuit seeks a court order to preclude that marketing and to provide payments to purchasers. Deoleo denies any wrongdoing. It contends that the Products have always been truthfully marketed and labeled. The Court has not determined whether Plaintiffs or Deoleo are correct.

If you purchased certain Bertolli brand olive oil between May 23, 2010 and April 16, 2018, you may be entitled to a cash payment from the Bertolli class action settlement.

This case involves three types of Bertolli brand olive oil sold in the United States during specified time periods:

- Bertolli Extra Virgin Olive Oil: May 23, 2010 and April 16, 2018
- Bertolli Extra Light Olive Oil: May 23, 2010 and December 31, 2015
- Bertolli Classico Olive Oil: May 23, 2010 and December 31, 2015

For purposes of settlement only, the Court has conditionally certified the following settlement class:

All persons who, between: (i) May 23, 2010 and April 16, 2018, purchased, in the United States, any of the Extra Virgin Olive Oil Products except for resale and/or (ii) between May 23, 2010 and December 31, 2015, purchased, in the United States, any of the Other Olive Oil Products.

If the settlement does not become effective (for example, because it is not finally approved, or the approval is reversed on appeal), then this litigation will continue, but only on behalf of purchasers in California. California classes of the purchasers have already been certified by the Court. Those classes were defined as follows: the "(i) Imported From Italy Class: All purchasers in California of liquid Bertolli Extra Light, Classico, or Extra Virgin olive oil, between May 23, 2010 and May 30, 2014, except for those bearing labels "Organic," "Robusto," "Gentile," or "Fragrante;" and the "(ii) Extra Virgin Olive Oil Class: All purchasers in California of bottles of Bertolli Extra Virgin olive oil, between May 23, 2010 and August 15, 2015, except for those bearing labels "Organic," "Robusto," "Gentile," or "Fragrante."

In the notice available at www.oliveoilsettlement.com, these groups will be referred to as the California Litigation Classes. Members of the California Litigation Classes have the same rights as all Settlement Class members as explained in this notice, except that they will remain part of the case even if the Settlement is rejected, as specified in the section "Special Notice for Members of the California Litigation Classes."

The deadline to opt out or object to the Bertolli olive oil class action settlement is July 12, 2018.

Who's Eligible

Class Members of the Bertolli olive oil settlement include anyone who purchased in the United States (not for resale) the following Bertolli products during the relevant time period:

- Bertolli Classico Olive Oil between May 23, 2010 and Dec. 31, 2015

PHILADELPHIA, May 18, 2018 /PRNewswire/ -- Gutride Safier LLP and Tycko & Zavareei LLP today announced that a proposed class action settlement has been reached involving purchasers of Bertolli Olive Oil (the "Products"). You are affected by this class action settlement if, between: (i) May 23, 2010 and April 16, 2018, you purchased, in the United States, a bottle of Bertolli Extra Virgin Olive Oil and/or (ii) May 23, 2010 and December 30, 2015, you purchased, in the United States, a bottle of Bertolli Classico or Extra Light Olive Oil. A complete list of covered products is included on the website www.oliveoilsettlement.com (the "Products").

This notice summarizes the proposed Settlement. For the precise terms and conditions of the Settlement, please see www.oliveoilsettlement.com or contact the Claim Administrator at the telephone number or address below.

The court has not determined whether any of the claims included in the settlement have merit, and the settlement is not an admission by Deoleo, the manufacturer of Bertolli olive oil of any wrongdoing.

WHAT DOES THE SETTLEMENT PROVIDE?

To settle the case, Defendant will create a settlement fund of $7,000,000.00. If you make a valid claim in the settlement, you will receive a cash payment for each bottle of olive oil that you purchased. The amounts paid to for each purchase will vary depending on the Product type, date of purchase, and number of claims received. The amounts to be paid are expected to be at least $0.75 to $1.75 per Product and may be as much as $3.75 to $8.75 per Product. You may make a claim without proof of purchase, but only for up to five products purchased by your household, for which you will receive a maximum combined recovery of $25.00. There is no limit on the number of items you can claim for which you submit proof of purchase. Proof of purchase means itemized retail sales receipts showing, at a minimum, the name of the product, and the date, place, and amount of purchase.

HOW TO GET THE REFUND

To get your refund, visit the settlement website at www.oliveoilsettlement.com and download or complete a claim form. You can also obtain a claim form by contacting the Claim Administrator.

HOW TO OPT OUT OF THE SETTLEMENT

The settlement will release all claims related to Plaintiffs' contentions that Defendant's marketing, advertising, and sale of Bertolli brand olive oil with the representations "Imported from Italy" and "Extra Virgin" were false or misleading. If you wish to preserve your right to bring a separate lawsuit on these claims, you must exclude yourself from the class.

OBJECTING TO THE SETTLEMENT

You can also object to the settlement. For details on how to exclude yourself or object, please visit www.oliveoilsettlement.com or contact the Claim Administrator.

COURT HEARING AND ATTORNEYS' FEES

The Court will hold a hearing on August 9, 2018 to consider whether to approve the settlement. The attorneys for the class will ask the court to award them up to $2,100,000.00 in fees and approximately $150,000.00 in out of pocket expenses and up to $11,000.00 in incentives to the individuals who pursued the suit, out of the settlement fund. If any balance remains in the settlement fund after payment of claims, costs of settlement notice and administration, and court-awarded fees, costs and incentives, the attorneys will ask the Court to give the remaining balance to various charitable organizations as further described at www.oliveoilsettlement.com. Note that the hearing date may change without further notice to you. Consult the settlement website at www.oliveoilsettlement.com or PACER, at <https://ecf.cand.uscourts.gov>, for updated information on the hearing date and time.

The case is Koller v. Deoleo USA, Inc., et al., United States District Court for the Northern District of California, Case No. 3:14-cv-02400-RS.

For further information, please visit the settlement website: www.oliveoilsettlement.com. You may contact the Claim Administrator toll-free by phone at 1-855-732-9315 or by writing to Koller v. Deoleo Settlement, Claim Administrator, 1801 Market Street, Suite 660, Philadelphia, PA 19103.

You may also contact class counsel at Gutride Safier LLP, 100 Pine Street, Suite 1250, San Francisco, CA 94111, access the Court docket on PACER available at <https://ecf.cand.uscourts.gov>, or visit the office of the Clerk of the Court for the United States District Court for the Northern District of California, 450 Golden Gate Ave, San Francisco, CA from 9:00 a.m. and 4:00 p.m., Monday through Friday, excluding Court holidays.
